SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

Examination of Patent Applications Containing Nucleotide Sequences

I. Introduction

Biotechnology is expected to be an important growth industry from now until well into the twenty-first century, particularly in the United States, one which will produce new therapeutics for the benefit of mankind. The Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) has taken a very active role in working together with its customers to simplify and standardize PTO policies and procedures and to encourage and promote the growth of this industry for the benefit of humanity.

For at least a decade, researchers in the biotechnology industry have been filing patent applications claiming isolated DNA or RNA sequences of nucleotides, referred to as nucleotide or nucleic acid sequences. Scientific and technological advances now permit researchers to identify large numbers of gene sequences rapidly. The ease of using automated techniques for sequencing large numbers of nucleotides in a nucleic acid has resulted in the filing of a growing number of patent applications, many of which recite thousands of individual nucleotide sequences with each sequence reciting at least several hundred nucleotides. The examination of these applications presents unprecedented search and examination challenges, even with the most modern, up-to-date equipment.

Faced with these challenges, the PTO held public hearings on issues relating to patent protection of nucleotide sequences on April 16, 1996, in San Diego, California and on April 23, 1996, in Arlington, Virginia. At those hearings, the PTO received several recommendations that restriction practice pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 121 should be applied to patent applications claiming nucleotide sequences.

This Notice responds to comments received during the hearings. This Notice clarifies PTO's policy for examination of patent applications that claim large numbers of nucleotide sequences.

II. The PTO Will Permit Applicants to Claim Up to Ten Independent and Distinct Nucleotide Sequences In One National Application

By statute, "[i]f two or more independent and distinct inventions are claimed in one application, the Commissioner may require the application to be restricted to one of the inventions." 35 U.S.C. § 121. Pursuant to this statute, the Rules of Practice in Patent Cases provide that "[i]f two or more independent and distinct inventions are claimed in a single application, the examiner in his action shall require the applicant . . . to elect that invention to which his claim shall be restricted." 37 CFR 1.142(a). See also 37 CFR 1.141(a).

Nucleotide sequences encoding different proteins are structurally distinct chemical compounds and are unrelated to one another. These sequences are thus deemed to normally constitute independent and distinct inventions within the meaning of 35 U.S.C. § 121. Absent evidence to the contrary, each such nucleotide sequence is presumed to represent an independent and distinct invention, subject to a restriction requirement pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 121 and 37 CFR 1.141 et seq. Nevertheless, to further aid the biotechnology industry in protecting its intellectual property without creating an undue burden on the Office, the Commissioner has decided sua sponte to partially waive the requirements of 37 CFR 1.141 et seq. and permit a reasonable number of such nucleotide sequences to be claimed in a single application.

Accordingly, in most cases, up to ten (10) independent and distinct nucleotide sequences will be examined in a single application without restriction. It has been determined that normally ten sequences constitute a reasonable number for examination purposes. The PTO believes that allowing applicants to claim up to ten (10) independent and distinct nucleotide sequences in a single application will promote efficient, cost-effective examination of these types of applications. In addition to the specifically selected sequences, those sequences which are patentably indistinct from the selected sequences will also be examined. Furthermore, nucleotide sequences encoding the same protein are not considered to be independent and distinct inventions and will continue to be examined together.

In some exceptional cases, the complex nature of the claimed material, for example a protein amino acid sequence reciting three dimensional folds, may necessitate that the reasonable number of sequences to be selected be less than ten (10). In other cases, applicants may petition pursuant to 37 CFR 1.181 for examination of additional nucleotide sequences by providing evidence that the different nucleotide sequences do not cover independent and distinct inventions.

III. Under the Unity of Invention Standard in an International Application or National Stage Application Filed Under 35 U.S.C. § 371, Up to Ten Nucleotide Sequences Will Be Searched and/or Examined Without Payment of An Additional Fee

International applications filed under the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) and national stage applications filed under 35 U.S.C. § 371 will be treated in a similar manner. Under 37 CFR 1.475 and 1.499 et seq., when claims do not comply with the requirement of unity of invention, i.e., when the claimed subject matter does not involve "one or more of the same or corresponding special technical features," 37 CFR 1.475(a), an additional fee is required to maintain the claims in the same application. 37 CFR 1.476(b).

The Commissioner has decided sua sponte to partially waive 37 CFR 1.475 and 1.499 et seq. to permit applicants to claim up to ten (10) nucleotide sequences which do not have the same or corresponding special technical feature, without the payment of an additional fee. The PCT permits inventions which lack unity of invention to be maintained in the same international application for the payment of additional fees. Thus, in international applications, for each group for which applicant has paid additional international search and/or preliminary examination fees, the PTO has determined that up to four (4) such additional sequences per group is a reasonable number for examination. Further, claims directed to the selected sequences will be examined with claims drawn to any sequence combinations which have a common technical feature with the selected sequences. Nucleotide sequences encoding the same protein are considered to satisfy the unity of invention standard and will continue to be examined together.

IV. Examples of Nucleotide Sequence Claims That Are the Subject of this Notice

Examples of typical nucleotide sequence claims impacted by this Notice include:

(1) an isolated and purified DNA fragment comprising DNA having at least 95% identity to a DNA sequence selected from SEQ ID Nos. 1-1,000;

(2) a combination of DNA fragments comprising SEQ ID Nos. 1-1,000; and

(3) a combination of DNA fragments, said combination containing at least thirty different DNA fragments selected from SEQ ID Nos. 1-1,000.

Applications claiming more than ten (10) individual independent and distinct nucleotide sequences in alternative form, such as set forth in example 1, will be subject to a restriction requirement. Only the ten (10) nucleotide sequences selected in response to the restriction requirement and any other claimed sequences which are patentably indistinct therefrom will be examined.

Applications claiming only a combination of nucleotide sequences, such as set forth in example 2, will generally not be subject to a restriction requirement. The presence of one novel and nonobvious sequence within the combination will render the entire combination allowable. The combination will be searched until one nucleotide sequence is found to be allowable. The order of searching will be chosen by the examiner to maximize the identification of an allowable sequence. If no individual nucleotide sequence is found to be allowable, the examiner will consider whether the combination of sequences taken as a whole renders the claim allowable.

Applications containing only composition claims reciting different combinations of individual nucleotide sequences, such as set forth in example 3, will be subject to a restriction requirement. Applicants will be required to select one combination for examination. If the selected combination contains ten or fewer sequences, all of the sequences of the combination will be searched. If the selected combination contains more than ten sequences, the combination will be examined following the procedures set forth above for example 2. More specifically, the combination will be searched until one nucleotide sequence is found to be allowable with the examiner choosing the order of search to maximize the identification of an allowable sequence. The identification of any allowable sequence(s) will cause all combinations containing the allowed sequence(s) to be allowed.

In applications containing all three claims set forth in examples 1-3, the PTO will require restriction of the application to ten sequences for initial examination purposes. Based upon the finding of allowable sequences, claims limited to the allowable sequences as in example 1, all combinations, such as in examples 2 and 3, containing the allowable sequences and any patentably indistinct sequences will be rejoined and allowed.

Rejoinder will be permitted for claims requiring any allowable sequence(s). Any claims which have been restricted and non-selected and which are limited to the allowable sequence(s) will be rejoined and examined.

V. Other Possible Solutions

The PTO is pursuing other possible ways to efficiently examine applications that claim large numbers of nucleotide sequences, including the following:

A. Software Development - Using private contractors, the PTO will attempt to identify, modify or develop software tools to aid in searching and the analysis of search results.

B. Feedback - The PTO will pursue and evaluate suggestions from applicants, members of the bar, industry, scientists, government, and inventors.

C. International Cooperation - The PTO will encourage greater cooperation between the other patent offices of the world in the area of biotechnology. The PTO will work with these offices to share resources thereby minimizing duplication of search and examination.

D. PTO Outside Search Center - The PTO will explore the possibility of establishing an outside search center which would perform standard searches for all patent applicants submitting applications containing nucleotide sequences.

E. Search Standards - The PTO will explore the possibility of establishing quality and proficiency standards for prior art searches so that applicants can perform their own pre-examination searches. Applicants could then submit their searches with their applications, and the PTO could examine applications based on applicants' searches.

F. Communication - The PTO will communicate its procedures for searching the prior art and how the current hardware and software have been optimized for examination needs.

Reference Collections of U.S. Patents and Trademarks Available for Public Use in Patent and Trademark Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent and Trademark Depository Libraries (PTDLs), receive patent and trademark information in various formats from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Many PTDLs have on file all full-text patents issued since 1790, trademarks published since 1872, and select collections of foreign patents. All PTDLs have both the patent and trademark sections of the Official Gazette of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. The full-text utility and design patents are distributed numerically on 16 mm microfilm, and plant patents on color microfiche. Patent and trademark search systems on CD-ROM (Compact Disc-Read Only) format are available at all PTDLs to increase utilization of and enhance access to the information found in patents and trademarks. It is through the CD-ROM systems that preliminary patent and trademark searches can be conducted through the numerically arranged collections.

All information is available for use by the public free of charge.

In addition, each PTDL offers reference publications which outline and provide access to the patent and trademark classification systems, as well as other documents and publications which supplement the basic search tools. PTDLs provide technical staff assistance in using all materials. Facilities for making paper copies of patent and trademark information are generally provided for a fee.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent and trademark collections among the PTDLs, and their hours of service to the public vary, anyone contemplating use of these collections at a particular library is urged to contact that library in advance about its collections, services, and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

*A communication from the examiner should have been received in most applications filed prior to this date.

Patents will Expire as Follows:
(1) The term of any utility or plant patent that is in force on or results from an application filed before June 8, 1995 is the greater of the 20 year term provided in 35 U.S.C. 154(a)(2) or 17 years from grant subject to any terminal disclaimers. 35 U.S.C. 154(c)(1).
(2) All utility and plant patents granted on applications having an actual United States filing date on or after June 8, 1995 are granted for a term which begins on the date on which the patent is granted and ends 20 years from the date on which the application was filed in the United States. If the application contains a specific reference to an earlier application under 35 U.S.C. 120, 121 or 365(c), the patent term ends twenty years from that date on which the earliest application was filed. 35 U.S.C. 154(a)(2).
(3) All design patents are granted for a term of 14 years from the date of the grant.
However, the term of any patent may have been curtailed by disclaimer under the provisions of 35 U.S.C. 153, have lapsed due to failure to pay maintenance fees, or have been extended under the provisions of 35 U.S.C. 154, 155, or 156. Thus, if more reliable information is needed with respect to a particular patent, then the specific patent file should be reviewed to determine the actual date of patent expiration.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).

SECTION 2.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).
